Summary

This report is an overview of the activities of 17 county Water Conservancy Boards (boards) within Washington State during the two-year period November 1, 2016, through October 31, 2018. For a Two-Year Tally of Board Actions, see Table 1 on Page 5.

Program Background

In an effort to alleviate the backlog of water right change applications on file with the Department of Ecology (Ecology), the 1997 Legislature authorized the creation of volunteer water conservancy boards in each county that chose to form a board. The boards process water right change and transfer applications only. They do not handle requests for new water rights and lack authority to process applications involving tribal lands.

There are now 17 county-initiated boards, 15 in eastern Washington and 2 west of the Cascades. At the peak in 2002, there were 21 boards established statewide. In 2014, Island County was the most recent government to dissolve their board due to inactivity.

The volunteer boards perform a valuable service to Washington citizens and businesses by reducing the time between filing and receiving a decision on water right change applications. The boards provide direct assistance to the potential applicants in their jurisdictions, and enable a more timely review of viable applications. The thorough review and vetting by boards in turn saves Ecology staff resources.

Each board is a separate, independently funded unit of local government, as provided in RCW 90.80.60 (2), and sets its application fee internally. The applicant pays a processing fee if the water right change application is accepted by the board and pays the cost of publishing a public notice in a local newspaper. Although board members volunteer their time, typical board expenses include travel costs for training, field exams, and general office expenses. The boards are required to submit annual expense reports to the State Auditor's Office, and submit to audits when requested by that office.

Annual reports are required to be submitted to Ecology, and are the basis of this report. See Page 10 for board reports for the 2017-2018 reporting cycle. You may find more information on Washington water conservancy boards and links to previous biennial reports online. <https://ecology.wa.gov/Water-Shorelines/Water-supply/Water-rights/Water-conservancy-boards>

Overview of Board Actions

All 17 of the Washington water conservancy boards submitted annual reports for 2017 and 16 of the boards submitted reports for 2018. Grant County did not report for 2018.

See Table 1 on Page 5 for a tabulation of board actions by Ecology region for the biennium. A comparison of those actions for the 2017-2018 reporting period vs. 2015-2016 shows:

- There was a decrease in accepted applications, from 115 in the 2015-2016 reporting period to 98 for 2017-2018, and a decrease in the number of board inquiries (including those with individual board commissioners) from 745 for 2015-2016 to 543 in 2017-2018.

- Approved water right decisions for all boards dropped by one from 76 to 75 from 2015-2016 to 2017-2018.
- There was a decrease in modified change applications from 36 to 27.
- The number of denied water right decisions dropped from 8 to 2.
- There was an increase in proposed transfers for water right certificates from 91 to 125.
- There was a decrease in proposed transfers for water right permits from 25 to 20.
- There was an increase of two in the number of applications withdrawn or declined (either by the board or the applicant), from 50 to 52.
- There was an increase in the number of decisions by water conservancy boards (approved, modified, denied, withdrawn from Ecology, remanded back to board, appealed to PCHB), from 95 to 116.
- There was a decrease in the total number of applications for surface water from 35 to 25.
- There was a decrease in the total number of applications for groundwater from 73 to 50.
- There were no approvals for changes from surface to ground or ground to surface water in 2017-2018 compared to 24 approvals in the 2015-2016 reporting period.
- And, there was a tripling in the total number of decisions to transfer to Trust Water from 3 in the 2015-2016 reporting period to 9 in 2017-2018.

Board Operations

Each board has acquired several years of operating experience, and some continue to write the Report of Examination (ROE), following careful review of the water right change application. It is now more common for boards to review the ROE completed by a consultant hired by the applicant. Ecology staff is available at every stage to provide technical assistance to the boards, but do not interact with the applicant unless requested by the board.

All board activities are subject to the Open Public Meetings Act, RCW 42.30 and 42.32, and requirements of the Public Records Act, RCW 42.56. Each eligible board member votes to approve or deny the ROE, documenting their rationale, conclusions, and the board's decision.

A board's Record of Decision (ROD) is submitted to Ecology for final review and decision. The public may submit comments during the board's review process, and up to 30 days after Ecology receives the board's final decision. The board or applicant can choose to withdraw the application from Ecology at any time prior to Ecology's final decision. Ecology may approve, approve with modification(s), return it to the board for further review or corrections, or deny the ROD. The applicant has the option to appeal Ecology's final decision to the PCHB.

Qualifications and Training

Board volunteers are appointed to a six-year term, and are required to complete an initial 32-hour training in hydrology, state water law, state water policy, administrative and judicial case law developments, field practices, evaluation of existing water rights, and practical experience working with Ecology staff on applications for water right transfers.

Ecology's Water Resources Program staff typically organizes and presents a 3-day live training, and many of the continuing education events, and also encourages/approves members' efforts to obtain continuing education on their own. Ecology has created nine online training modules as a way to improve training accessibility and reduce time and travel costs that are incurred by the board members and Ecology staff.
